

The Lord Can Do a Lot With a Little

John 6:1-14

YEARS ago in England, one of Mrs. Cameron's Sunday School students came to her after class with a request. He held up a sixpence and said, "Please will you give this coin to Jesus?" Startled, she almost told the child she couldn't do that, but she felt the restraining hand of the Lord directing her to take it. "All right," she told him, "I'll give it to Jesus." That night she prayed, "Lord Jesus, this is your sixpence. What do you want me to do with it?" The next morning, she used the sixpence to buy currants and self-rising flour and made some buns. Within half an hour, they had all sold. With the money, she made more buns, and sold them. She continued making and selling buns, and added some other items such as beans.

This went on for a while, and then she thought, "Why not sell Bibles?" Soon she was selling buns, beans, and Bibles. She made so much money, she decided to remove her front window and to install a shop window. Then she began a line of Christian books. She was truly in business now, selling buns, beans, Bibles and Christ-centered books. Her sales continued to increase. Her ledger book revealed where much of the money went in listing after listing: George Mueller's orphanage £125 (a considerable sum in those days), China Inland Mission £150, Congo Evangelistic Mission £200, etc. Page after page recorded money she had sent out across the world ministering to countless missionary organizations and orphanages, and it all began with a little boy's sixpence. It wasn't so important what the boy had, but where he put it. He put it into the hands of Jesus. The Lord Jesus is the Lord of multiplication and abundance. It all started with one little coin that was lovingly given to Jesus.

~George Zeller: www.middletonbiblechurch.org

The Lord Can Do a Lot With a Little

John 6:1-14

YEARS ago in England, one of Mrs. Cameron's Sunday School students came to her after class with a request. He held up a sixpence and said, "Please will you give this coin to Jesus?" Startled, she almost told the child she couldn't do that, but she felt the restraining hand of the Lord directing her to take it. "All right," she told him, "I'll give it to Jesus." That night she prayed, "Lord Jesus, this is your sixpence. What do you want me to do with it?" The next morning, she used the sixpence to buy currants and self-rising flour and made some buns. Within half an hour, they had all sold. With the money, she made more buns, and sold them. She continued making and selling buns, and added some other items such as beans.

This went on for a while, and then she thought, "Why not sell Bibles?" Soon she was selling buns, beans, and Bibles. She made so much money, she decided to remove her front window and to install a shop window. Then she began a line of Christian books. She was truly in business now, selling buns, beans, Bibles and Christ-centered books. Her sales continued to increase. Her ledger book revealed where much of the money went in listing after listing: George Mueller's orphanage £125 (a considerable sum in those days), China Inland Mission £150, Congo Evangelistic Mission £200, etc. Page after page recorded money she had sent out across the world ministering to countless missionary organizations and orphanages, and it all began with a little boy's sixpence. It wasn't so important what the boy had, but where he put it. He put it into the hands of Jesus. The Lord Jesus is the Lord of multiplication and abundance. It all started with one little coin that was lovingly given to Jesus.

~George Zeller: www.middletonbiblechurch.org